Western Margin Drilling Program update.

Noble Helium Limited (ASX:NHE) has taken the difficult but prudent decision to postpone the western margin shallow drilling program.

Based on the recommendation of Technical Director and Co-founder Justyn Wood the board has resolved to postpone the western margin shallow drilling program. With the short-term weather forecast predicting increasing rain events and with current access between Kinambo and Mbebele restricted the Company will look to recommence the program at the conclusion of the current rainy season.

Building on lessons from 2023/24, the drilling contract allows the Company to activate such a pause in operations with minimal financial exposure and the rig remains available to mobilise once conditions allow.

This announcement has been authorised for release on ASX by Noble Helium's Board of Directors.
