FirstWave Seals Agreement with Claro Dominican Republic

Global software group FirstWave Cloud Technology Limited (ASX: FCT) is pleased to announce it has reached an agreement with Claro Dominican Republic to license its NMIS v9 software suite.

Claro is the dominant telecommunications provider in the Dominican Republic and is part of the América Móvil, S.A.B. de C.V. [BMV: AMX] [NYSE: AMX, AMOV] conglomerate, which also includes Mexico's leading telecommunications company Telmex.

Under the terms of the agreement, Claro DR will pay an upfront licensing fee of $USD250,000 (~$AUD400,000). This licence fee is 100% gross profit and does not require any delivery, support or professional services.

FirstWave's NMIS 9 technology will enable Claro to take advantage of the upcoming release of FirstWave's Model Context Protocol for AI which is currently in testing. It also provides Claro with the recently released Message Bus technology which facilitates high availability and high scale use of FirstWave software.

Speaking from FirstWave's LATAM head office in Mexico City, Managing Director Danny Maher stated:

"It's fantastic to see Claro's commitment to our technology roadmap. North America and Latin America are key strategic territories for FirstWave and I look forward to bringing more good news from this region and updating the market on our progress. I fully support the relationship with America Movil and I have great belief in the benefits our technology delivers for them."
