Kidder Williams to Accelerate Global Growth Strategy

22 July 2025 – Perth, Australia – ClearVue Technologies Limited (ASX:CPV) (ClearVue or the Company) is pleased to announce it has appointed Kidder Williams, to review the Company’s structure and strategic growth options.

Kidder Williams’ Chairman David Williams said: “We are excited to work with ClearVue and its scalable technology embedding solar into building materials such as glass and building panels. In a world where renewable energy is critical, commercialising this technology and taking it to the world is an exciting proposition.”

Kidder Williams’ Managing Director Tim Faulkner said: “Our immediate focus will include, among other things:

- ensuring the organisational structure is fit for growth,
- narrowing the focus of sales and marketing to prove the product in the Asia Pacific market,
- identify and secure qualified distributors in other markets, and
- advising on funding and optimal capital structure.”

ClearVue’s Chairman, Victor Rosenberg said: “We are excited to work alongside Kidder Williams, whose strategic insight and long track record advising growth companies make them an ideal partner for ClearVue. Their broad experience – from the purchase of CitiPower and more recently on a windfarm in Tasmania and the purchase of a $460m Limestone Energy Park battery project in South Australia – demonstrates their sector knowledge. Combined with their success supporting companies such as PolyNovo and Bega, their involvement will be instrumental as we accelerate ClearVue’s global growth strategy.”
