Stapylton Site Connects to Electricity Grid

PWR Holdings Limited (PWR or the Company) is pleased to advise that its Stapylton headquarters was successfully connected to the south-east Queensland electricity grid over the weekend, almost three months after moving the majority of its operating assets to its new headquarters.

Mr Kees Weel, Managing Director, said, "we are thrilled that we have finally connected into the grid and no longer need to rely on the four generators we required to operate our site. It has been a long journey to secure this connection and has meant we had to purchase and rent generators and incur extra expense supplying them with diesel on a daily basis. It also means that we can now connect our 1.8MW of solar into the grid reducing our electricity bills and our greenhouse gas emissions".

This announcement has been authorised by the PWR Board.
