Appendix A

Market overview and regulatory environment

Market Overview^{1,2}

- Prize draws are products where participants may enter via either a paid entry route or a free entry route and have the chance to win prizes.
- Unlike charity lotteries, prize draws can be operated purely for commercial gain and are not subject to caps on the value of prizes, which allow high-value prizes to be offered such as houses or luxury cars, compared to lower value prizes typically offered by charity lotteries.
- It is estimated that the UK prize draw market is worth £1.3 billion annually, with 7.4 million adult participants (14% of adult population) and over 400 operators.

Regulatory Environment

- The UK Gambling Act 2005 (GA 2005) requires that a free entry route is offered for a prize draw not to be categorised as a regulated lottery. As such, provided that a free entry route is offered which complies with the relevant provisions of the GA 2005, a prize draw is not within the regulatory scope of the UK Gambling Commission².
- In addition, the UK's advertising regulator, the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA), publishes advertising codes which include specific requirements for Prize Draw Operators, mainly focussing around fair terms, transparency and other consumer protections.
- In June 2025, the UK Government announced the introduction of a Voluntary Code of Practice (Code) for Prize Draw Operators to come into effect later in the year. It is anticipated that the Code will introduce various measures designed to enhance player protections, improve transparency and fairness for consumers, and ensure a higher level of operator accountability.
- The level of operator compliance with the Code and the extent to which the Code raises standards across the sector will determine whether the Government takes any further action to regulate the prize draw sector.
- Jumbo welcomes the introduction of this Code as it will encourage a level playing field across the sector and increase consumer confidence and trust in Prize Draw Operators.

Key takeaways

- 1 Prize draws are not subject to the same regulatory oversight as gambling products, but must comply with consumer protection laws and advertising codes applicable to the sector
- 2 Ongoing monitoring of industry best practice and legislative developments is essential for operator success
- 3 Jumbo welcomes the Voluntary Code and with our proven regulatory expertise are well positioned to adapt and lead
