Chevron orders 2,000 Swift TV devices

Today, Swift announced it has received a purchase order to supply Chevron’s Wheatstone Village with 2,000 Swift TV devices.

This order has allowed Chevron to secure the 2,000 units allocation from Swift’s initial shipment of its new Swift TV product for installation in the new year.

Swift TV is a Google certified, and Netflix approved connected TV product delivering an in-room engagement and entertainment solution for enterprise customers.

Swift’s innovative new product, Swift TV, integrates Swift’s proprietary technology developed by its in-house Research and Development team with a Google certified device, to enable direct access to the Google App Store through the Swift TV user interface.

Netflix has also approved the pre-installation of the Netflix app within Swift TV. Access to the Netflix app via Swift TV will ensure end users will continue to be able to access their subscription, as Netflix shifts away from access to its service via casting solutions.

Swift CEO Brian Mangano commented, “We are pleased to be continuing our relationship with Chevron and our partners at Compass Group and that we have been able to secure an allocation of 2,000 Swift TV devices from our initial shipment for our valued customer. Swift’s extensive experience within this sector has led to the development of product features and solutions to overcome challenges unique to the Oil and Gas sector, particularly for offshore locations. Making Swift the product of choice for the Oil and Gas sector. Our latest innovation Swift TV continues this journey with a market-first product, offering an ‘all in one’ solution.”
