Hamilton Locke to set up KLVAUD stablecoin legal framework

Klevo Rewards Limited (ASX: KLV) ("Klevo" or "Company") is pleased to announce that its wholly owned subsidiary, Fly Wallet Pty Ltd ("Fly Wallet"), has engaged Australian full-service law firm Hamilton Locke to assist with navigating the regulatory treatment of digital assets, stablecoins and financial services.

The Hamilton Locke team is led by Jaime Lumsden, who is a leading expert on financial services law, particularly as it relates to digital assets. She is a Band 2 Ranked Lawyer in the Chambers Fintech Guide and Band 4 in the Asia Pacific Guide for Financial Services Regulation. Jaime has advocated passionately for crypto reform, through authoring Hamilton Locke submissions, contributing to industry submissions, and testifying at the Senate Economics Legislation Committee's enquiry into digital assets legislation. She leads her team in working with a range of digital assets businesses, including exchanges, token issuers, crypto lending platforms, and crypto investment platforms. Fly Wallet looks forward to working collaboratively with Hamilton Locke as it launches the KLV stablecoin.

Jaime Lumsden noted "it is always a great to work with sophisticated and inquisitive clients like Fly Wallet looking to maximise innovation in Australia and engage proactively in ensuring their offerings are not only compliant but solving real world issues."

This announcement is authorised for release by the Board of Directors of the Company.
