Federal Court dismisses ASIC's market disclosure allegations concerning Nuix

Sydney, Australia – The Federal Court of Australia has today delivered its judgment dismissing the enforcement proceedings brought by ASIC against Nuix and its then directors for alleged continuous disclosure breaches and misleading conduct in 2021.

Nuix Chairman, Robert Mactier said:

“We are pleased that the Federal Court has resolved the allegations concerning Nuix’s early 2021 market disclosure and that the cases against both Nuix and the then directors of the company have been dismissed.

We are committed to driving shareholder value, supporting our people and customers and using our products and services as a force for good.”

ASIC has a period of time to consider whether it will appeal the decision.

A copy of the judgment is available here.
