First Australian Ensight Contract Secured with Lumus Imaging

Enlitic, Inc. (ASX: ENL) ("Enlitic" or the "Company") has signed a three-year Ensight subscription agreement with Lumus Imaging ("Lumus"), a leading Australian diagnostic imaging provider. The agreement is Enlitic's first Ensight subscription in the Australian market and establishes a deployment within a major national imaging network.

Lumus will deploy the full Ensight platform from the outset across three use cases: Hanging Protocols (which standardises how imaging studies are presented to radiologists at the point of read), de-identification, and AI validation. This multi-use-case adoption reflects growing customer demand for Ensight as a data infrastructure platform, rather than for data migration alone.

The agreement marks Enlitic's entry into the Australian subscription market and demonstrates growing real-world demand for Ensight across core imaging workflows. It provides a reference deployment for further enterprise subscriptions across Australia and the wider Asia Pacific region and supports the Company's transition from migration and services revenue toward a recurring SaaS model.

The agreement carries a contract value of US$248,000 (~A$359,000[1]) over its three-year term. Go-live is expected to occur during H2 2026 and the enterprise pricing reflects the workflow, functionality and study-volume scope of each deployment, rather than site count alone.

Lumus operates on Intelerad's IntelePACS, enabling deployment through Enlitic's existing integration with that platform. The integration was first deployed at RHCNZ Medical Imaging Group, New Zealand's largest private radiology provider (see ASX announcement: 12 May 2026). Intelerad is one of eight global OEMs actively engaged with Enlitic's offering, and this second enterprise deployment demonstrates the repeatability of Enlitic's OEM channel.

Lumus, formerly Healthcare Imaging Services, is an established Australian diagnostic imaging provider with more than 30 years of operating history. It operates 150 locations across Australia supported by more than 2,000 healthcare professionals, delivering a full range of imaging modalities including MRI, CT, ultrasound, mammography, X-ray, PET/CT and nuclear medicine.

Enlitic CEO Michael Sistenich said: "Signing Lumus as our first Australian Ensight subscription customer is an important entry point into the Australian market. Lumus's decision to adopt the full Ensight platform, across hanging protocols, de-identification and AI validation, shows both real demand for the technology and its breadth across core imaging workflows. This multi-year agreement provides a foundation to grow the relationship over time and directly supports our strategy of building recurring SasS revenue in the large medical imaging sector."
